
Staying Warm this Winter

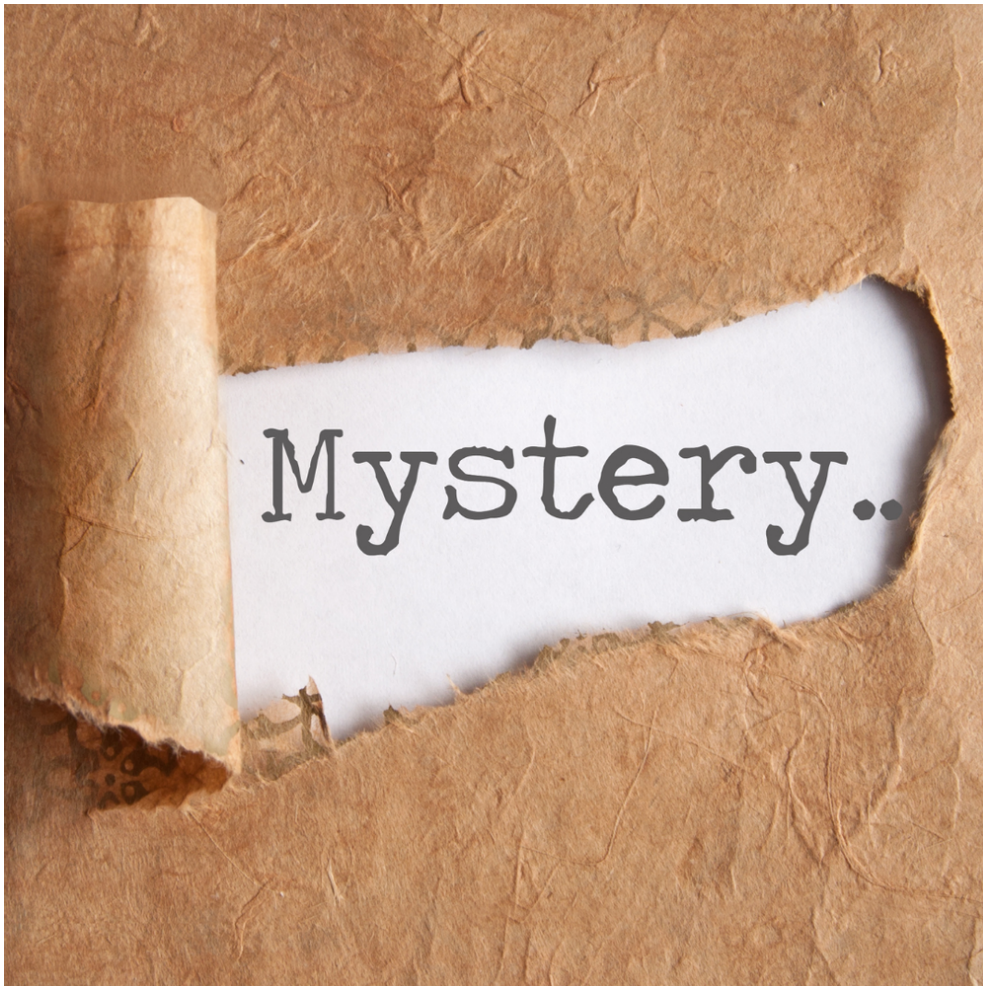

DESCENT DETECTIVE
DISCOVERER OF LOST NARRATIVES

Hi,

I hope this message finds you all doing well as the country is currently experiencing a deep freeze where only Hawaii seems to be at a reasonable temperature. While I would love to be spending my winter in Hawaii, I have been busily researching, reading, and writing while our home is currently undergoing our 'winter remodel' project of replacing all of our carpets with new laminate flooring.

This month's blog post has all my favorites of mystery, family history, and a gripping story. Hope you enjoy!

What would you do...

Not all heinous crimes are documented in a newspaper and if you want to know the story behind the sordid tale, you might just have to dig a little deeper into your family history. Helene Stapinski did just that. She wrote about her efforts in...

Check out the interview I did with Podcast Business News Network earlier this month. This quick clip will give you a sneak peek at what is coming in March.

March 11th, 18th, and 25th Jill Nicolini will be interviewing me, live at 9 am MST. All three interviews can be heard at PBN Podcast Studio #1 and TuneIn.

February 26th is Tell a Fairy Tale Day. The origin story of most fairy tales is based upon true stories that were amended or embellished over the years. Much like the stories that are passed down in our families, they are important not just for the moral but the act of telling stories itself.

If you need assistance in separating fact from fiction in your family stories, let me know, I'd be happy to help.

"Sara helped me complete a 5-year journey to document my family's Italian heritage and obtain my dual citizenship with Italy. She found family details deep within my northwest Denver roots to trace my grandparents' immigration and settlement in America. I could not have achieved dual citizenship without Sara's guidance and assistance. I would highly recommend Sara Dawson and Descent Detective, LLC." ~ P.C.M.

Warm Wishes!
